

The Cancer Legal Resource Center is a community-based, joint program of Loyola Law School and the Disability Rights Legal Center.

The Cancer Legal Resource Center provides free and confidential information and resources on cancer-related legal issues to people with cancer, their families, friends, healthcare professionals, employers and others coping with cancer.

Since it opened in 1997, the Cancer Legal Resource Center has helped over 65,000 people through telephone assistance, conferences, outreach programs, seminars, workshops and other community activities.

Why Should You Call the Cancer Legal Resource Center?

Just ask the people who have used our services:

“This is a great resource that is easily accessible during a time of crisis — when answers are needed most.”

“In the midst of utter chaos, your service was exactly what I needed to sort things out, and to realize there are people out there who cared about what I was going through.”

“It is comforting to know that there are professionals who take the extra time to give of themselves and offer their expertise. You are special.”

“I didn’t know where to turn, and your service was so helpful.”

“The attorney I spoke with was very generous with his time and help. The information you sent me was highly informative and helpful.”

“I liked that the friendly atmosphere in the room was contagious and helpful to those who were anxious. The legal program was very helpful to those who needed it.”

“The presenter was very knowledgeable and patient. Legal issues are imperative to many people. Most of us don’t think about it or understand it until we need it.”

“Thank you for being there for us.”
